

NORTHERN NEW TERRITORIES HASH HOUSE HARRIERS

NEWSLETTER ISSUE 3

RUN 1383, 5 AUGUST 2009

A good turnout braved the slime, rain and lightning for Gunpowder Plod's tour of Sai Sha Road

A tropical cyclone had passed over in the early morning, but apart from a few forlorn, derisory gusts the expected typhoon – and T8 hash – never materialised. Which was good news for the GM as he was down to set the T8 but was recuperating from an encounter with a septic tank and had injured his leg to boot.

But the untempestuous day didn't stop the rain bands, which swept over with the regularity of Billy Jizz masturbating – and about as copiously. The hare, Gunpowder Plod, advised bring wellies. And so the pack set off, splashing along flooded paths, wading through sodden swathes of vegetation and sliding all over the oily rocks. At least the run was true to Plod's word and there were no 45-degree slimy, thorn-snarled jungly slopes to pull haul yourself up.

Or were there? How would I know? I had to wait for Go West (who was bringing me a torch and was late) and managed to stay with him for precisely

5.7 seconds before he shot off in frantic pursuit of the pack. And caught it of course. The the other latecomer, G-Spot, cruised past me after a particularly frustrating solo circumnavigation of a picnic area I just couldn't find trail out of, and I was well and truly on my own.

Unlike everybody else, who all came back in about 1 hour 10, fulsome in their praise of the amazingly well laid trail that kept everybody together with its checks and checkbacks and coastal canterers and foresty bits and village patrols and scary lightning and Mango's arse holding people up in tunnels.

As for me, I hit Sai Sha Road about half way through trail, decided the leg had had enough, and started walking back to the start.

Only trouble was, I was 180 degrees off orientation, and heading towards Kei Ling Ha Ha Ha.
